“It simply lays bare the categorical deception at the heart of all branding and retail. The different watch values are, in the strictest sense, speech acts: the watch is $29.99 because someone said it’s $29.99. It’s $29.99 because a certain person is wearing it on Instagram; it’s $29.99 because it’s photographed next to fannel and a Chemex. While “Bradley” of “Bradley’s men’s shop” may not be the most feshed-out character, he – and the entire existence of Folsom & Co., Sofcoastal, etc. – are examples of the now-household term, “brand storytelling.” And the internet makes it possible for anyone to tell any story, about anything, from anywhere.”

Social media
closes the gap
between brand
and consumer.

Turns brands into
people.

“Glorification of the normal”

Social media
turns everyone
into a brand.

“Population-wise, it’s larger than any single country; in fact, it’s bigger than any continent besides Asia. At 2 billion members, “monthly active Facebook users” is the single largest non-biologically sorted group of people on the planet after “Christians” – and, growing consistently at around 17 percent year after year, it could surpass that group before the end of 2017 and encompass one-third of the world’s population by this time next year.”

advertising
companies

(this is not a bad thing!)

Creates a tension between serving
users and serving advertisers.

In the final three months of the US presidential campaign, the top-performing fake election news stories on Facebook generated more engagement than the top stories from major news outlets such as the New York Times, Washington Post, Huffington Post, NBC News and others.
